This was a poem written by Ciera when she was around 14 years old. It's a little dark, as was quite a bit of her poetry. She was a beautiful soul.

I cannot send a message

*I cannot send a message,
For they've put me in the ground,*

*I hate to say,
that you won't be seeing me around,*

*I am consumed with a feeling of despair, as I watch everyone I've ever known sobbing and staring coldly into space,
In this cold, wet, and dark place.*

*I feel a sense of peace and somehow it begins carrying me away.... no I must stay!
I need to try and comfort everyone,
I feel their sadness and heartache is because of me,*

*So you see,
I cannot move on,
Because you feel you still need me so,*

*Maybe one day I'll take that peaceful flight,
.... If you can let me go..*

“ Ciera and I recently ran into eachother briefly after years of not knowing where either of us had ended up. A month later I heard she was gone. Must have been God's was of telling eachother good bye. She had a beautiful, free spirited soul and was capable of anything she put her mind to. It's sad to see such a young life gone, and even more sad that her baby boy no longer has a mommy.
