“Dad served me my first cup of coffee. I was about 9, sitting at the kitchen table and looking out the window at a rabbit hopping among the apple trees in the backyard. Suddenly, I heard my Dad ask, "Do you want a cup of coffee?" Thinking that my stepmom or my grandma was in the kitchen with him, I turned around to see him looking at me. "Uh, is it okay?" I asked, thinking I was about to commit some mortal sin. "Sure," he said. "You may want to doctor it up with some cream and sugar, though." These days, my doctor has me restricted to decaf, but I still carry that love for coffee that I inherited from my dad. <3
