“ I remember the first time that I meet Jason when were little kids going to church and we started talking to each other. Then we started going to the same school and we was always together hanging out. Went to all the dances together, called each other on the phone every night growing up. That was my First Best Friend ever. We lost touch with each other for a little bit because we had found our own lives but the week before he died we had started talking to each other again and I am so thankful that we got to see each other again even though it was short.
