“ I had the pleasure to work with Dick at Delco Remy in the late 1990s. Our cubicles shared a common wall. I was new to the group and as I moved into my desk, I asked if it was alright for me to hang my name plaque on the shared wall, as was the practice in the group. Dick laughed and said sure. Over the next year, I would arrive and Dick would have made a slight embellishment to my name plaque. He would stay quietly looking at his desk as I would burst out laughing at the latest embellishment. It eventually looked like a Las Vegas sign complete with flowers and colored lights, thanks to Dick. Such a wonderful memory of a kind, gentle soul. Sending prayers of comfort to Dick's family.
