“ I wanted to share a special memory that I have of your father. When I was a little girl, living on Madison Avenue between 3rd and 4th streets, your father had a small neighborhood grocery store on the corner of 3rd and Madison. I used to go in there with my mother or grandmother, when they went to pick up groceries. Your father would always cut me off a piece of County Line Cheese from the big cheese wheel. What a treat that was! I just turned 50 yesterday and I've never forgotten my trips to that neighborhood store or your father's kindness. What a special man he was. I'm sure you have many special memories, but I wanted to share a special one of mine. My mother, Helen Jean Jones Brinson, also grew up in that neighborhood and I thought she told me that she went to school with with some of Mr. Roseberry's children. I wasn't sure if you would recognize her name or not. She passed away a year ago last October. May your memories give you comfort and may God Bless your family.
