“ I Jane last remember Vivian when she was a patient on my floor at St Johns MC. She was smiling and telling me how good she felt and how she loved her family.

“ I remember Vivian when we were young and went to Dr. Stinsons office. She made the visit worth going. She was always so good to us and I cant help from thinking about her each time I see Dr. Mark Stinson now. My prayers are with you and the family. May God bless you all and please lean on the Lord for support. He will not let you down. God Bless Robert P Hendrickson

“ Grandma Some of you called her Vivian, some called her Beanie, But only one of you were fortunate enough to call her mother. But to many of us she was known as grandma. What does the word grandma mean? To most of us who knew her it spells many wonderful memories. As a child she taught me that Jesus loves all the children, and church and family are important. She also taught me that ladies dressed and fixed their nails properly. When she went out she was well manicured with her high heels on. She was very much a snappy lady. Grandma loved children; they were perfect in her eyes. She loved to wear her satin night cap!! You never found her with her shoes off, she always had to have something on her feet. When she could see well she curled up in bed with a good book. She enjoyed reading everyone?s horoscopes daily. She had a nickname for everyone, and even today I may not recognize someone?s legal name when it is used. She also had a risqué and ornery side. She loved to laugh, and always liked to hear a good joke, or see a funny or dirty movie. She wanted to have the ?scoop? about everyone and liked to hear about people, ?You know?! As I grew up I realized just what a special lady she was. She had a hard life, her mother died when she was 5. Grandma never complained or placed blame, instead rose above the unfortunate happenings to achieve her goals. She never pretended to be perfect but always had good advice. She would go without so others could have. Never greedy or wanting anything but love and harmony. She put herself on the side line so that others could shine. She makes me proud of my heritage. She lived simply and followed two great commandments: Love God above everything else and Love others as you love yourself. The unselfish lady paved a road through her life all the way to heaven. Now the time has come for her torch to be passed. Today we should take that torch and live by her example. We, too, can be responsible for others welfare, help when help is needed unselfishly, and love unconditionally. Thank you grandma for not only loving Daniel and Colin but for enjoying everything about them!
