“ Sorry to be so late with this tribute. I just became aware of Bill's death during a visit to my nephew in Florida. Bill was my half brother, 33 years older than myself. He was always very kind to me despite my own mother's animosity toward him. Bill lived through some hard times and raised a family of five too. He was a fine brother and a good man. I wish I'd spent more time with him.

“ Bill stands out as on of the "old timers." His stories of road trips and horse races always took me back to an idyllic time in American history. I thought of him as a grandfather, though it wasn't until about ten years ago he came into our lives. We will always remember him fondly and think of him often.
