“ I often think about you. I remember you teaching me how to crochet and all those piano lessons. Allowing me to make "messes" in the kitchen while you cooked or baked. You always made the best ice cream sundaes in those special cups and the staws with peppermint sticks. I remember walking to town with you and we would visit all the dime stores, catch up with grandpa when he got off work and see a movie. BENJI! I think that was the first movie I ever saw on the big screen. We would catch the bus and visit with some of your lady friends. Edna, Mrs Alley, and Mrs Huntzinger. I remember how you would let us play store with your shoes and jewelry. You would let me dress you up and put makeup on you before we would go to town. I think back now of how I had no idea what I was doing but you still went dressed in what I picked out for you and the makeup I put on you. I thought I had done such a great job at the time with only being about 10 years old. But I think back now and how ridiculous you looked but you still went and had a smile on your face. Knowing perfectly well what you looked like. oh but Grandma I sure miss you now. I loved hearing your stories about your family and the crazy things you did as a young woman and a young girl. Thank you Grandma for giving me so much love. I miss you and I love you so very much.
